Special terms of use for materials from the Panasonic media database

1. The contents of the media database is protected by copyright.
2. Materials (images, logos, texts, templates, etc.) may only be used as follows: by re-sellers to advertise Panasonic products, by journalists and writers for reports and other documents, or by service providers commissioned by Panasonic (advertising agencies, authorized repair shops). You are required to cite Panasonic as the source, especially when materials from Panasonic are used in press releases, blogs, and books or other texts intended for publishing.
3. You may not modify the images or logos in any way except for rendering color material in black and white or resizing material (image proportions must be retained).
4. The usage of protected trademarks is governed by the general trademark laws. Trademarks owned by third parties (e.g. test logos) may only be used under the conditions and terms supplied by the third party. As far as third-party material is concerned, users act on their own responsibility and in the case of infringements of trademark laws Panasonic will not be liable to any third-party claims.
5. Wholesalers and purchasing cooperatives are entitled to supply their customers with material from the media database for the sole purpose of advertising Panasonic products. It is their responsibility to ensure that their customers adhere to the terms of use and the general rules of copyright law.
6. Panasonic reserves the right, without notice and in its sole discretion, to revoke the permission to use the media database. Upon receipt of the revocation, you must cease to use the database immediately. In the case of illegal use of database material, Panasonic reserves all rights, including injunction and damages.
7. The general terms of use for the Panasonic website and Panasonic's privacy policy also apply.
